JAPANESE HAS PLEA

four times a day. The first three days after we left Astoria, the captain treated the boy all right, but after that the bad treatment increased until it ended in the killing. Yes, there was a fixed time for these abuses, always at lunch time, dinner and breakfast. I guess the boy complained of being cruelly treated twenty-four of five times. The captain would hold him by the hand and treat him cruelly. The defendant was cleaning a lamp in the stern of the ship one day, when the captain approached, and the defendant showed him some waste, which was blackened by the cleaning, and wanted some more. The captain declined to give it and I saw him strike the defendant in the back. One of the sailors knows that too, it was him (pointing out H. Fortune). He also told me that the captain hit him in the shoulder with his fist. I didn't see that.

The witness said he had not talked with the defendant since the time the boy had been put in irons, and he had been locked in the store room. He said he had no chance to speak on the way to the shore, and once he asked the boy how he cut his thumb, and the white man who talked Japanese (Doyle) told the boy not to talk.

This closed the morning session, and the witnesses were placed under bonds of $500 each. The Jap, Oto, was given into the custody of Deputy Marshal Handy without bail.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

"On the day the captain was killed," the Jap resumed, at the opening of the afternoon session, "I got up at four o'clock in the morning, and the defendant got up at 3:30 and prepared coffee, while I started to get fish ready for the men. The boy took coffee to the watchman and the mate, and about 4:30 o'clock to the captain. I don't know what took place there. I was not present. After that the boy went back to sleep in his room, after spending some time in the galley. Pretty soon the captain came down the stairs, and went through the donkey room, asking me for the boy. I did not see the boy get from his bunk. He, the captain, came in and said, 'How are you this morning?' and I answered 'Very well, thank you.' Then he talked with me about the bill of fare, some sweet soup he wanted made. I told him I had lots of experience in cooking, but had never heard of that, and asked for his cook book. He didn't have any, he said, but showed me how to make sweet soup, with raisins and apples. I had no complaint against the captain. Then the captain went above, and pretty soon called me, 'You know where Tom is?' I say boy in bunk asleep, and captain said 'Tell boy to come in cabin right away.' I walked boy, he went immediately to captain without saying a word, and he started up, and at the foot of the stairs was met by the captain. I was in a table making bread, with my face towards the forecabin, and away from them. The captain shoved and struck defendant, grabbed the defendant by the left arm and shoved him back. Then he said 'Hurry up,' and I saw him strike the boy seven or eight times. The boy said nothing and after that went to the captain's room. He never said anything to me when he came back, but sat on a box of oranges. In three or four minutes the captain arrived; he came down the ladder and at the entrance between donkey room and galley, the captain saw the boy, and said 'Come.' He grabbed the defendant by the arm with his right hand, pulling him along, the boy followed the captain into the junction between galley and donkey room, and then I heard the captain call 'Meyer, Meyer, Meyer' three times. I turned around them and saw the captain and boy grabbing hold of each other's hands, and fighting, and I ran up stairs calling for the mate, and said: 'Captain and boy trouble, you come quick,' then I went to the captain's wife and said 'Captain and boy trouble,' and she said: 'Ah,' and cried out."

"Was the captain's wife in tears," asked the United States attorney. "I didn't have time to see that," was the reply.

"Why did she cry? Did you tell her about the stabbing?"

"I didn't tell any one about the stabbing. I tried to separate them by pulling the defendant. I saw no sharp instrument, so I told second mate."

"Was the captain in danger?"

"No."

"Was the boy in danger?"

"No."

"Why did you tell the second mate then?"

"The captain ordered me and I went to report when he called. I didn't stay because I was weaker than the boy and captain."

"Was there danger then?"

"No, if there had been danger, I would have run away. I pulled the boy by the suspender."

"The boy didn't have any suspenders," interrupted Mate Meyer who had come into the court room.

"What color of suspenders did the boy wear?" then asked Mr. Breckons.

"It was spotted suspender, color like lobster," was the answer of the witness.

"Did you tell the boy to sit down when they were fighting?"

"Yes, I told him it is bad to fight."

"How did you get by the captain and boy to go to the donkey room?"

"I pulled them out of the way, and escaped by the door."

"Did you pull them both?"

"I pulled the boy and the captain also moved. I pulled him by the suspenders and pants."

The witness told at length how he had called the mates down, and said at the time he left the scene, there was no cut on the face of the captain. He said he did not see a knife in the hands of the boy or any at all, nor did he see blood running from the captain's wounds.

He denied meeting the mate at the foot of the stairs, or passing the colored man, Samuel, on the stairs. He admitted that a knife answering the description of the one which had been used in the murder was in his kitchen before the conviction of crime, and had since been missing. The cook virtually contradicted every other witness examined, in the important parts of his testimony, and many times, was caught in a trap by the District Attorney, denying statements he had made previously.

The mate, Meyer, was put on the stand and denied the statement of the cook as regards his calling him, saying that Oto had come up crying "Cabin boy stab captain."

The hearing was continued until this morning at nine o'clock, when the examination will be concluded. There are a few more questions to be asked of Oto, and a statement will probably be made by the defendant. The boy will be held to the grand jury, very likely, without bonds.

BY AUTHORITY.

The Government propose to dispose of half a dozen lots of five or six hundred acres each, situated at Luahualui, Waianae, Oahu, and running from the main ridge makai to the line of cane land leased to Waianae Plantation, by special time payment agreements of sale, requiring conditions of residence or improvement or both.

In order to be informed of the demand for such lands under the said conditions, I should like to receive communications from those interested enclosing any questions they may wish to ask on the subject.

The lands referred to include pasture, and arable land and are partially covered with algaroba forest.

Plans can be seen at the Public Lands Office, Honolulu.

RICH LAND

-IN-

Central Kona FOR SALE

By order of REINNE RODAMER, Trustee, I offer for sale those certain parcels of land situated at Onouhi, South Kona, Island of Hawaii, described in Royal Patent (Grant) No. 1182 to F. O. Schulze, and containing 174 acres. Royal Patent (Grant) No. 2862 to Awauna, and containing 739 75-100 acres. Situated at Keopuka and Onouhi, Island of Hawaii.

This is a tract of land of over 925 acres, situated on the most fertile and richest portion of the Island of Hawaii. It faces the new Government road, extends to the sea, and is five minutes' walk from Kealakua Bay, by way of the old Government road which runs through the property. Portions of the land are already under cultivation.

This tract is so situated that it is about midway between Kailua and Hookeana, and five miles from Napele, three most important ports of the Kona district. It has sufficient elevation, running up to fourteen hundred feet, to be particularly healthy, and its soil is well adapted to the growth of sugar cane, coffee, fruits, diversified farming.

Occupants of this land have easy access to several ports for export, and with the advent of the Kona Railroad will find themselves in close communication with the thriving City of Hilo. This, of course, affords a splendid opportunity for the exporting of farm products to the California markets.

With the revival of the Kona Sugar Co., considerable portions of this land can be successfully planted to sugar cane.

This is one of the most splendid opportunities for a good investment that has been put upon the market for a considerable period of time.
